

WHEREAS; the practice of caring for the earth is rooted in the cultural practices of Indigenous people, and we recognize that the twelve Native Nations that call Wisconsin home are the original stewards of this land; and

WHEREAS; founded in 1970 by former Wisconsin Governor and U.S. Senator Gaylord Nelson to raise awareness about the environmental challenges facing our planet, including air and water pollution, Earth Day is now celebrated in Wisconsin and around the world every year on April 22; and

WHEREAS; on the inaugural Earth Day, then-Senator Nelson stated that “our goal is not just an environment of clean air and water and scenic beauty,” but “an environment of decency, quality, and mutual respect for all other human beings and all other living creatures”; and

WHEREAS; the first Earth Day saw nearly 20 million Americans participate in rallies, marches, and teach-ins for environmental education at high schools, colleges, and universities across our state and country, and catalyzed a grassroots movement that led to the bipartisan passage of the Clean Air, Clean Water, Endangered Species, and Marine Mammal Protection Acts, as well as the founding of the Environmental Protection Agency; and

WHEREAS; today, pollution and climate change continue to pose serious threats to Wisconsin’s fish, wildlife, and other natural resources along with the health, safety, and economic well-being of all Wisconsinites, and exacerbate historic injustices and existing threats to lower income communities and communities of color; and

WHEREAS; the state of Wisconsin affirms that all people, regardless of race, gender, income, or geography, have the right to a healthy and sustainable environment, and that environmental justice must be kept at the forefront of all efforts to ensure and protect this right; and

WHEREAS; effective and equitable solutions to address environmental challenges will require determination, innovation, imagination, science, and collaboration that can lead to improved health, a transformed and more resilient economy, and a more sustainable future; and

WHEREAS; Earth Day ignited a spirit of stewardship that has driven progress for over five decades, and serves as an annual reminder of the constant need for environmental justice and activism, cooperation and stewardship commitments, and sustainability efforts; and

WHEREAS; this Earth Day, the state of Wisconsin affirms that conserving, restoring, and growing trees in both rural and urban areas remain one of the simplest and most powerful tools for storing carbon and tackling climate change, and pledges to conserve 125,000 acres of forestland and to plant 75 million trees by the end of 2030, in collaboration with public, private, and non-governmental partners;
